Cryptoquip

The cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think the X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Bridge

Steve Becker

This deal occurred in a match between Panama and Canada at the 1980 World Bridge Olympiad. It illustrates how, even in the highest echelons, defense often proves to be the hardest part of the game. At the first table, the Panamanian South opened one notrump (14 to 16 points) and wound up in three notrump one round later. The Canadian West then found the most effective lead of the heart queen. When the queen held, West continued with the jack, ducked again. However, East overtook the jack with the king and returned the eight to dummy's ace.

You might well wonder how South could now make three notrump, but the fact is that he did. At trick four, he led a spade from dummy to his king, which held, and then led the five of diamonds to dummy's queen, which also held! Declarer then scampered home with six club tricks to score 400 points.

At the second table, with Canada now sitting North-South, the bidding went:

South West North East 1♦ Pass 2♣ Dble Pass 2♠ Pass Pass Dble Pass 3♣ Pass Pass 3 NT Pass Pass Dble Pass Pass Reddle

Again the opening lead was the queen of hearts, but here declarer took the ace of hearts at trick one and, just as his counterpart had done, then led a spade to the king, which held, and the five of diamonds to the queen, which also held! Six club tricks later, South had scored 750 points, yielding a 350-point gain for his team.

In allowing declarer to make three notrump, the East-West pairs at both tables overlooked a basic principle of defense: When declarer completely ignores dummy's most promising suit and tries instead to score a trick at a time in other suits, dummy's suit is probably already established.

Tomorrow: Self-preservation.
